

PUT DOG TAG IN THE HASH

Curious Stratagem Against Hamburger Resorted to at a Local Boarding House.

A story was going the rounds yesterday concerning an incident which happened quite recently in a well-known local boarding house.

It appears that the affections of the landlady of the house in question ran to Hamburger steak, and the patrons of her establishment were given constant opportunities to acquire a confirmed taste for the chopped edible.

The landlady, however, did not cotton to one another at all; in fact, the inoffensive steak became the target of more anathemas than did Bun Ko, the cook.

In vain did the boarders drop hints, both gentle and ungentle about a close season for Hamburger. The landlady remained firm in her allegiance to the mincemeat, and it continued to grace the table as frequently as before.

Finally one of the boarders in desperation resolved to adopt heroic measures, and with this end in view obtained clandestine entrance to the meat safe and interviewed a plate of uncooked Hamburger intended to make its debut at the evening repast, for a second or two. Then he stealthily glided away and gloatingly yearned for the smiting of the dinner gong.

Dinner time came. So did the boarders, also the Hamburger, which was duly apportioned. For a few minutes jaws worked in unison. Presently, one of the party commenced to blaspheme, and was observed to remove something from his mouth.

"What is it?" was asked in chorus. "Fido," laconically answered the boarder, as he held up a piece of metal for inspection.

It was a dog tag, and, so the boarders aver, the stratagem worked like a charm.

This remedy actually kills the parasites that infect the hair bulb, does its work most effective and contains not an atom of substance injurious to anything else than the germ alone. Herpicide causes the hair to grow as nature intended it should, soft and abundant.
